Mr. Tipton's Views.

Speaking of the Legislature, Mr. Tipton, Representative of this county, says that he thinks the Philip Bill, which is the amended Hamilton road bill, will become a law.

The bicycle bill, introduced by Mr. Tipton, has been or will be so amended as to include the taxing of all vehicles, but it will be so arranged that taxes paid for land or other purposes will offset the vehicle tax. The purpose of the bill is to tax all vehicles for road purposes, but as it would be eminently unfair to tax farm teams or heavy teams, which now pay local taxes, these teams will not be affected except for such an amount as this bill would impose upon them beyond the existing local tax.

TUBERCULOSIS.

FARMERS MAY HAVE THEIR CATTLE EXAMINED—it is a contagious disease, and to be dreaded.

Dr. M. Mortarty, Veterinary Surgeon, of this place, has received instructions from the State Veterinarian that he is to make the examination for the Farmers and to furnish the report. Tuberculosis to make the diagnosis. A farmer desiring to have his stock examined will make application to the State Live Stock Sanitary Board, and the inspection will be made at the expense of the State.

As we understand that there have been a few cases of this disease in Adams county we would urge the acceptance of this offer by the State, so that the trouble may not spread. Dr. Mortarty can give necessary instructions.

Following are a few facts of interest:

Tuberculosis in cattle exists to an alarming degree and active steps are being taken to eradicate the disease. It is well known that Tuberculosis in cattle is communicable to man; and, according to the best authorities, the disease causes from 12 to 20 per cent. of the annual mortality in humans, beings residing in the northern temperate zone. The principal sources of danger of contagion consist in being in contact with diseased animals, eating Tuberculous meat and drinking the milk of Tuberculous cows.

Tuberculosis is communicated from one animal to another. It is, therefore, to the immediate interest of every dairyman and cattle breeder to ascertain which animals are Tuberculous, and which are not, so that the healthy may be separated from the diseased and be removed from the certainty of contagion. Moreover, the demand for milk from certified Non-Tuberculous cows is rapidly becoming general, and the dairyman who can supply the demand must necessarily have an advantage.

It is at the most advanced stage of the disease that Tuberculosis can be discovered by a physical examination; but by the aid of Tuberculosis the existence of the disease can be ascertained even in its earliest stages. This is of the utmost importance as a diseased animal can be easily diagnosed and prevented from infecting whole herds.

Tuberculosis is a scirrhus extract of the germs of Tuberculosis. It is perfectly harmless. It contains no living germs of Tuberculosis, and cannot, therefore, communicate this disease to a healthy animal; the milk of the cow is unaffected by its use; it does not interfere with gestation; even if the cow is ready to calve.

The Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington, the State Boards of Agriculture, Live Stock and Sanitary Commissions, the State Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, State, County and City Boards of Health, and large numbers of private Veterinarians throughout the country have during the last three years extensively used the test for testing cattle for Tuberculosis, and unanimously recommend it as the only reliable method of diagnosing the disease. Moreover, experiments tend to show that Tuberculosis possesses curative properties and that repeated injections will cure Tuberculosis, if the disease be not too far advanced.

Cattle breeders and dairymen are recommended, in their own interest, to test their herds in order that they may isolate suspicious animals and preserve their healthy cattle from infection. Tuberculosis is a hereditary and many authorities admit that Tuberculosis cannot be used for breeding; but the dairyman will find it of great aid in his business to be able to state that he supplies Non-Tuberculous Milk.

Cultivating the soil after it is growing should be done in manner not only to afford the root-hair, but also to avoid injury to the plants. Roots or potatos are just appearing the roots do not extend very far, and the cutting of teeth may go down deep, but when the roots of corn interface through the surface of the soil the cultivation should be shallow in order to avoid cutting them. There is an implement known as the weeder, which does excellent work on weeds when they first appear above ground, and that is when the greatest effort should be made to destroy the pests. Weeds appear quickly after rain and the cultivator should be used to loosen the soil after every shower, as the cultivation can then be done in the most effective manner and at a time when the weeds have germinated. The hoe should not be overlooked if all the weeds are not destroyed by the cultivator, as every weed that grows to seed makes more work for next year.

Beets and carrots are hardy and should be put in as early as possible in order to get the benefit of the spring rains and to also allow as much time as possible for growth, so as to be in use before summer is over. Later crops are never grown if defaced.

It matters not how the profit is made provided it is secured. The facility of marketing the products largely governs the success of the farmer. And, happiness is the result if the farmer can get a better price for his hay by shipping it from the farm to the buyer than he can by having it come to the farm by rail and the farmer should be enabled to sell as much of the high priced product as possible.

It is an excellent plan not to plant the same kind of crop on the same land two years in succession, and this rule should apply to the garden also. Onions are closer to the earth than any other, but it has been found that beans and the maggots are the result of so doing. New land is now used for onions every year, especially if the soil was thoroughly manured the previous year for some other crop, as fresh manure is not the best for onions.

Two-year-old steers have made an increase of 11 pounds a day, five weight, when fed for five or six months, and it has been found that a larger profit can be made from 2-year-old steers than to keep them longer, as the daily increase of the animal decreases as it becomes older. It has been found unprofitable to raise beef from scrub stock, however, even under the most favorable conditions of feeding.

Do not buy screenings as food, for in so doing the seeds of weeds will be brought on the farm. Screenings are not cheap at any price. They have done more than their share to scatter weeds over the country. The best way to use screenings is to burn them.

FARM NOTES.

AN ASSEMBLY OF SHORT ARTICLES ON THE VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS OF THE FARM.

In Europe and portions of Canada the ewes are milked, and the milk used for cheese making. It may be added that some of the best brands of cheese on the market come from farms where no cows are kept, ewes' milk being relied upon entirely.

Early garden crops may go in the ground at any time after the ground has been plowed, provided the soil is warm; but it can only be done to risk loss from frost during April and May. There is something gained if the early crops escape damage, otherwise the work of preparing the ground and planting more seed must be repeated. Warm days in April may be followed by a frost in May.

Lime exists in nearly all soils, even on limestone land an application of slaked lime gives beneficial effects. The lime in limestone soils is not immediately soluble, existing as "salt"; which absorbs water, thus alkalinizing the soil. Lime is good for the vineyard, the vine being a plant which requires a lime soil.

It relieves and prevents "morning sickness," relieves the distressed feeling, shortens labor, makes recovery rapid and certain without any dangerous after-effects.
